

The Weekly Ink Waster

November 24, 2003 #2

Welcome back

Hi. Good to see you again. More pointless rubbish, mindless humor, and meaningless rantings are in store for you. The website is up at www.geocities.com/vperpetua, and this issue should be posted by Tuesday. Don't forget to email me!

Back to the Future

I was emailed this list of things that they used to do in the 60s and 70s. These will definitely appeal to the older audience reading this, plus anybody who thinks laughing is a good, not bad thing. Anybody who doesn't, well you need to work on the whole SENSE OF HUMOR thing if you want to be popular. Here they are:

- 1.) We spent hours building our cars out of junk. The lucky one would have a downhill street and halfway through we would remember we didn't have brakes. After a few crashes with lampposts we would SOLVE the problem not pay a mechanic to fix our cars.*
- 2.) We would go home for lunch from school.*
- 3.) We had no pagers or cell phones but our parents always knew where we were.*
- 4.) We would share a soda between four, we all drank from the same* bottle and yet nobody ever died from this.

5.) We did not have Play Station, Nintendo 64, Game Cube, video games, 99 cable TV channels, VCR's or DVDs, cell phones, computers, or Internet. We had friends.

6.) We were out in the world without bodyguards and no mommy or daddy wiping our behinds.

7.) We played baseball, with a baseball that we all pitched into to buy, when the teams were picked we were not always chosen, yet we held no grudges, and suffered no psychological trauma.

8.) When your parents told you to help or work, you could not accuse them of child labor and no Human Rights agent would hold your case.

9.) You had liberty, failures, success, and you learned how to deal with them. Are you from this generation??? Young people today say we were boring, but boy were we happy.

007 Nightfire

I have been asked to make my review shorter and funnier this week when I review 007 Nightfire, and I will honor that request. Anyway, 007 Nightfire is a lot of fun (I recommend The Exchange, Enemies Vanquished, & Equinox), but if you get stuck somewhere, you'll be stuck like a glue-coated thumbtack on a bulletin board. The in-game hints provide little help, and the guide is inaccurate. Might as well cheat. I didn't tell you that. Keep your eyes peeled for the new game, James Bond: Everything or Nothing.

To the Next Level

Chris Motto has written a small guest feature to compliment the Ink Waster. Here it is:

For today's game I will talk about ways to make Lord of the Rings Two Towers' level The Swamp easier. I suggest you use Legolas in this level since most of the enemies use long range combat - it is easier because you can take them out faster with Legolas's arrows. The boss will fall faster with Legolas's arrows since they are stronger. Well, that's all for now - this is Chris Motto saying have a good day.

Avery's Soda

Let me just take a minute to say that there's a little place in New Britain called Avery's Soda. They make their own beverages, so please support them, as they are not doing so hot. Thanks.

HEALTH ALERT

Tasty Mexican grasshoppers have been found to have dangerously high amounts of poisonous lead. Don't eat em', and if you, for some wacko-bizarro reason, like to snack on these critters, go get tested for lead poisoning - and take a trip to the psychologist, cause it must have been something really crazy that possessed you to eat grasshoppers.

Sayonara

The answer to that shocking question was a watt. My trumpet teacher was the only person to get it right, and no, Jared, it is not a current, but thanks for trying. Bye-bye!

Byron Perpetua

byronperpetua@yahoo.com

www.geocities.com/vperpetua